The Office on the Americans with Disabilities Act will consider your complaint (The authority for collecting this information is contained in 42 U.S.C. § 12188(b)) and inform you of its action. The Office on the ADA will investigate the complaint and determine whether to begin litigation. The Office on the ADA will not necessarily make a determination on each complaint about whether or not there is an ADA violation. If the Office on the ADA believes there is a pattern or practice of discrimination, or the complaint raises an issue of general public importance, it may attempt to negotiate a settlement of the matter, or it may bring an action in the U.S. District Court. Any such action would be taken on behalf of the United States; the Office on the ADA does not act as an attorney for, or representative of, the complainant. You also have the option of filing your own case in U.S. District Court.

The Office on the Americans with Disabilities Act needs this information in order to investigate your complaint. The personal information will be used primarily for authorized civil rights compliance and enforcement activities conducted by the Department of Justice. The Department of Justice will not disclose the name of, or other identifying information about, an individual unless it is necessary for enforcement activities against an entity alleged to have violated federal law, or unless such information is required to be disclosed under the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552, or as is allowed through the publication of a routine use in accordance with the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. § 552a. To further the Department of Justice's enforcement activities, information the Office on the ADA has about you may be given to appropriate federal, state, or local agencies. Additional disclosures of information may be made: to members of Congress or staff; to volunteer student workers within the Department of Justice so that they may perform their duties; to the news media when release is made consistent with the Freedom of Information Act and 28 C.F.R. 40.2; and to the national Archives and Records Administration and General Services Administration to perform records management inspection functions in accordance with their statutory responsibilities. Furnishing of the requested information is voluntary except that the failure to provide such information may result in the Office on the ADA being unable to process your complaint.
